The Kincaid house is a large brick building which has been covered with stucco. There is neither water table nor belt course, but there is a brick cornice, 2/3 of which is molded, the other 1/3 of stepped brick. Apparently the house built in two portions, the first was two bays long and two bays deep with a large chimney on the south gable. The other 1/3 was built soon after but the cornice is the only feature which is different. There is also a two story wing on the north gable. The whole building is three bays long and two bays deep covered with an "A" roof. All of the sash are 6/6. The house is situated in a grove of large locust trees and looks down a shaded lane to the west and a pasture to the east. On the grounds, west of the main house is a good little brick kitchen or slave quarters which is two bays long and one bay deep with "A" roof. The chimney is located on the north gable; the door is on the south side of the east facade, adjacent to a windows with 8/8 sash. The attic joists rafters are exposed beyond the brick facade, like the slave quarter at Willshaven Farm, only a few miles distance.
